

STORY OF THE SHOOTING OF HENEY

San Francisco's Very Sensational Courtroom Crime

REJECTED JUROR FIRED FROM CLOSE AGAINST HIS VICTIM'S HEAD
—HENEY'S NERVE SHOWS UP IN THE HOURS FOLLOWING THE SHOOTING—GREAT MASS MEETINGS OF CITIZENS CHEER THE NAME OF THE PROSECUTORS.

(From the Chronicle of Nov. 14.)
The shooting occurred while Heney was seated at the table usually occupied by the prosecution, immediately in front of the spectators and outside of the rail. He was conversing with Chief Clerk Al McCabe of the District Attorney's office and James A. Gallagher, the witness of the day. Haas approached along the right aisle, walking rapidly but not in such a way as to attract attention. When within about four feet of the unsuspecting victim he drew a 38-caliber revolver which he had carried hidden partly by his left arm and partly by the folds of his coat, and without uttering a syllable or making the slightest pause fired a single shot. Heney, who had been sitting with his elbows resting on the table before him, sank forward without a groan, and for an instant the witnesses of the crime were so spell-bound by the occurrence that not a soul moved. Then C. H. Gish, a contractor of 1682 San Jose avenue and a former juror in Department 6 of the Superior Court, sprang forward and grabbed Haas by the shoulder. He was immediately joined by Deputy Sheriff Frank Coyle and Detective John Foley of the prosecution. Haas was dragged through the small gate which separates the courtroom from the space occupied by Judge, jury, clerk and stenographer. It was done so quickly that the crowd was unable to vent its horror upon the criminal, who threw himself on his back and at first refused to say a word—even to give a name.

Meantime McCabe had caught Heney in his arms and prevented his head from falling to the table, which was rapidly becoming flooded with blood. The wounded man was then assisted to the floor by many anxious hands, and after a hasty examination of the wound by Dr. H. E. Franck, who happened to be present, word was passed around that Heney would die. The deputy sheriffs and police officers who were present at once began to clear the courtroom, fearing that it would be impossible otherwise to protect the life of the miscreant who had fired the shot. Assistant District Attorney John O'Gara, who has been Heney's assistant in the prosecution of the present case against Ruef, knelt down to receive what all feared would be a dying statement.

HENEY'S WORDS TO O'GARA.
Heney had fought heroically against the pain of his wound, which was near the right temple, and up to the moment when O'Gara knelt down he had hardly closed his eyes, maintaining consciousness by sheer force of will. When told of the possible fatal character of his injury he whispered to O'Gara:

"I believe I am going to die. I don't know who shot me. I thought that it was a blow delivered from some one behind me."

There was considerable delay in obtaining an ambulance, but as soon as one could be procured Heney was carried from the scene of the attempt upon his life to the Central Emergency Hospital.

Haas, who had been held down all this while by his original captors, finally burst out in a frenzied explanation of his crime.

"I did it for mankind!" he cried, while the deputy sheriffs made a ring around such of the crowd as had not yet been sent from the room. "I would not consider myself fit to live if I had not done it," he continued, without a sign of sympathy for his victim.

SITKA HEARS STAR STORY BY WIRELESS

OLD FRIENDS TALK BACK AND FORTH OVER 2,395 MILES OF OCEAN
—ISBELL AT KAHUKU AND HANSCOM IN ALASKA INDULGE IN LENGTHY AND CHATTY CONVERSATION—NAVAL ELECTRICIAN SENDS A LAUGH OVER THE WATERS.

A streak of chummy wireless talk scorched the ether between Kahuku and Sitka, 2,395 miles from Honolulu, between Wireless Wizard Isbell's dinner and bedtime last night, for two old friends were discussing wireless and other things across the ocean.

A. A. Isbell and Electrician Hanscom, who is chief electrician at the Mare Island Navy Yard, were the parties to the long-distance conversation and the messages they exchanged were lengthy and many, the sparkings being clear and without any possibility of misunderstanding.

Hanscom had been sent by the United States Navy to Sitka, Alaska, to establish a wireless station and it was from the station at Sitka that Hanscom talked to his old-time friend Isbell at Kahuku, this island, over two thousand miles away.

"I heard you were signed by the juice," said Hanscom, at Sitka, "do you feel any ill effect?"

"I did get a bit of a shock," replied Isbell, "but after a few days of nervousness I am all right again. All in the day's work, you know. How are you and yours?"

"All tip-top, thanks. When are you coming to San Francisco?"

"Got yours of October 20 all right. Thanks for the snap-shots."

"Did you get mine of November 8?"

"No."

"There was nothing of particular importance in it, except a little dope on statistics that would have interested you."

"I'll look forward to it. How did you address it?"

"Same as usual."

"I'll get it soon. How's the weather your way?"

"Warm for this time of year. Hilo-nian, coming, reports head winds. Hongkong is delayed. Tenyo reports heavy weather. How is it up Alaska?"

"Some cool."

Then long messages of a technical nature were exchanged, both stations, Sitka and Kahuku, trying out and performing various tests dear to the hearts of experts.

THE WAIMEA BREAKWATER

CHANGES ARE REQUIRED BY THE SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC WORKS.

That changes must be made in the breakwater which has been erected at the mouth of the Waimea river by Gay and Robinson, is the edict which has gone forth from the Department of Public Works. Superintendent Campbell, who has just returned from Kaula, made a thorough examination of the work and decided that the deflections of current which it causes are doing harm rather than good, and the plan of the work must be changed to meet with the approval of the Territorial Government.

The work which has been put in is not very expensive, only about $1000 having been expended and even this is by no means lost. There will be no rupture over the matter as both the Territory and the plantation company are anxious to bring about the best results for the public good.

Another matter taken up by Superintendent of Public Works Campbell while on Kaula was the acquisition of a site for the new school at Elele. Land will be obtained from the McBryde interests on the bluff above Hanapepe gulch, giving a most excellent location for the new building. Still another bit of work to be done will be the building of an addition to the courthouse at Koloa, in order that Assessor J. K. Farley may have an office there. His present office is not located on Government property.

CHAIRMAN OF ROADS

Republicans are going to have little to say in the matter of organizing the new municipal government, if conclusions reached at a Democratic meeting last night are correct. It was decided that no confirmations of the mayor's first appointments are needed, and Mayor-elect Fern will proceed to name city and county officers before the new Board of Supervisors comes into existence at all.

There is a special provision of the municipal act which, it is said, allows this. Ordinarily the mayor's appointments are to be confirmed by the supervisors, but as the present officers' terms all absolutely expire at the end of the year, without any provision for holding on until successors are qualified, there is a special provision allowing the mayor to appoint in advance. This is what the Democratic mayor proposes to do.

The mayor will also name the chairmen of the committees of the supervisors. McClellan, it is said, will be the chairman of the Road committee.

WORK OF HEMENWAY

Deputy Attorney General Whitney received a long letter from his superior, Attorney General Hemenway, this morning. The latter stated that he had practically completed his work in Washington when the letter was written on November 7. The Lanai case was to come up in the Supreme Court that day with Attorney Brown, well known here, to open the argument and to be followed by Hemenway. Judge H. E. Cooper was then to take part, representing the Irwin interests, and Brown would close.

Mr. Hemenway stated that he expected to win the Rapid Transit, Morita Kelso and Cotton Bros. cases and cable messages have shown that he was right in the first two instances, but the Cotton Bros. case has not yet been heard from.

In the Liliha street case he said that he had submitted his case on brief, feeling that it was better to do this and that D. L. Withington had made a verbal argument. He expected to go to New York for further work on this case as soon as the Lanai matter had been completed.

HOSPITAL SHIP RELIEF MAY BE LOST IN STORM

(Associated Press Cable to The Star.)

MANILA, P. I., November 24.—The United States Naval hospital ship Relief, in command of Surgeon Charles F. Stokes, recently detached from the Atlantic fleet at Manila and bound for Guam, en route to Honolulu and San Francisco, is reported from Guam as not yet arrived. She is considerably overdue there and great anxiety is felt for her in view of severe storms which have been prevailing.
